ELDER SCREEN This is a game I have a lot of affection for. If you don't know it yet, I would recommend trying to play it for free. It is a very short game, but definitely worth it. The plot is simple, and it is only through interpretation that you get to decide where this game goes. The game doesn't have a huge menu of choices, but rather just a few special things to buy. This version of the game is available in three languages; English, Spanish, and French. The combat is fluid and can be very simple. You are equipped with a bow and arrow, which can be upgraded. Most items are found naturally in the world, and though the system seems random, it actually works. Almost everything can be found in the world, aside from the special weapons. After you upgrade these weapons, they become stronger, but also more expensive, so keep that in mind. The customization allows the players to create their own special weapons, but how this works is a mystery as well. The weapons are mostly one-handed, but if you want the other hand, you have to provide your own. This includes armor as well, which is a good idea when going through the world. None of the items in the game are restricted in ability, so you can create any type of character you want. The story takes place in a world that seems similar to the real world, such as the volcano that suddenly erupts and bursts up in flames. The game is very short, and is probably only good for a few hours of playtime. Though it is a very simple story, there is still a lot to learn. In the end, you are left with a lot of questions. The game tells you almost nothing about the world, and the tone isn't quite clear. This is a game that you can enjoy. THE NEW FANTASY ACTION RPG. This is a game I have a lot of affection for. By Jamie Munford, Whistle To some, animal trapping is the law and order of the forest. To others, it is a despicable form of cruelty and the practice of the unethical. Still others view it as legitimate sport. "We have an opportunity to work with the public to start the conversation that's needed to bring new people into the movement," says Dr. Ross J. Puchala, director of the Vermont Division of Wildlife Resources. Puchala will host a workshop in concert with the American Fisheries Society, the Fish Society of New England and the Wildlife Management Society of New England on Saturday, March 2 at the Decatur Lodge. The event will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and is free and open to the public. "The goal of the event is to have the opportunity for the public to have a better understanding of traps and trapping and to educate and sensitize the public. In particular, we will be talking about how we can work together to help animal trap managers develop more humane alternatives," Puchala says. "We're expecting about 150 people to participate in the workshop," he says. "We'll have two presenters and then have a question and answer time. Our presenters will be Doug Melnick, associate director of the Wildlife Management Institute of the University of Maine, and Chris Sellick, assistant professor of wildlife ecology at the Vermont Institute of Natural Science. People will also have the opportunity to ask questions and comment. "Trout fishing, fishing for pheasant, grouse, bear and
