Download

As Frank leaves the fair, he can be seen by a young girl, Casey Newton, who has brought along a miniature pin that she has been given by her grandfather. Frank decides to assist her and ask what she's doing. She responds that she's joining Dr. Nix as a translator, and he invites her to come with him as his personal assistant. Frank refuses and asks if he might stay with her, and she introduces him to her grandfather, who tells him that his jetpack had been rejected, as well as many other prototypes that Frank had shown him, and that he had seen through them all. The old man tells him, if he wishes to survive this new world, he must escape the Tomorrowland that his inventions have built. Knowing about the large-scale, ambitious Tomorrowland theme park, Frank is not surprised to hear of its creation, and the fact that he has been initially barred from visiting it, due to his associations with several of the competing inventors, he wonders if that might mean that someone thinks he is going to try to steal ideas and technology, unlike the way he helped them out in the past. Using his jetpack and a large catapult, Frank and Casey soar across the sky and land near the attraction. Casey reveals that she is a guest at Tomorrowland because her grandfather was a guest there many years ago. Casey then explains that she's been given a Pin with a T embossed on it from her grandfather, to find its meaning, and they both ask Frank to follow them into the attraction, as the challenge of finding out how to operate its systems makes for an interesting adventure. Casey tells Frank of the amazing discovery she has made - there are two other people on board with them. They are David Nix and Atlas - a large, muscular, intelligent robot who is David's right-hand man and the guardian of Tomorrowland. The trio are now faced with a dilemma: they do not trust Frank or David, and their trust in Casey has been broken. Despite their doubts, Frank and Casey agree to use the help of Atlas to explore the park, to uncover the reason for the robots distrust of Frank. In the meantime, David orders Atlas to find someone called Tinker.
